Teaching

I currently serve as an Assistant Professor of Philosophy within the West Bengal Educational Service (W.B.E.S.) at Maulana Azad College, Kolkata. Prior to this appointment, I accumulated eleven years of teaching experience in higher education. My primary core areas of teaching expertise encompass Metaphysics, Ethics, Social Philosophy, and Psychology. Furthermore, I specialize in instructing students on the Western Philosophy of Language.

My instructional methodology is not merely confined to the standard curriculum, as I actively transcend conventional rote learning. I deeply inform my classroom lectures by integrating complex themes from my research paradigm in cognitive science and linguistic theory. In my classes, I consistently encourage an atmosphere of active dialogue, analytical clarity, and cross-disciplinary critical thinking. This pedagogical approach successfully prepares my students to navigate both classical philosophical texts and modern conceptual challenges with equal proficiency.

Research

My academic research profile demonstrates a highly sophisticated engagement with analytical philosophy, specifically focusing on the intersection of the philosophy of mind, language, and cognitive science. My doctoral dissertation, submitted to the Faculty of Arts at Jadavpur University, is titled “The Language of Thought Hypothesis: A Critical exposition of Jerry Fodor’s Theory”. My research footprint is dual-faceted, successfully balancing specialized analytical philosophy with culturally resonant, interdisciplinary scholarship across several peer-reviewed volumes and international journals. In addition to my publications, I regularly present my findings at diverse academic conferences.
