Kolkata, West Bengal, India 700013

Concept Note:

Balancing economic growth, human development, and environmental sustainability has emerged as one of the most urgent concerns of our time. Yet, the way these challenges unfold varies widely across regions, shaped by differences in natural resources, their utilisation, and local socio-economic contexts. Policymakers often grapple with administrative and political pressures, while researchers and academicians tend to adopt broader, long-term analytical views. These differing approaches make it essential to create platforms where diverse perspectives can meet, engage, and evolve into workable solutions.

As part of the Centenary Celebrations of Maulana Azad College, Kolkata, the Departments of Economics and Statistics, in collaboration with the Regional Science Association, is hosting the 57th Conference of the Association on campus. The chosen theme highlights the pressing contemporary issues at the intersection of environment and development, aiming to foster sustained dialogue and collaboration among policymakers, researchers, academicians, and practitioners. Through this conference, the organizers envision a shared space for collective thinking, fresh insights, and informed strategies to address the complexities of sustainable development across regions.
